Quarterly Commentary (31 December 2025)

The Baobab Equity AMC had a strong quarter to finish the year. While 2025 was another solid year for investors in the Fund, it was a year in which we lagged on a relative basis given the outsized gains in precious metal shares in particular. Given the differentiated nature of the portfolio this sort of variance in performance is not unusual.

We do not invest in or manage the portfolio against the market. We are seeking to provide investors with superior long-term returns by investing substantial parts of the portfolio in areas of the market that larger institutions and benchmark conscious investors ignore. When we look at some of the winners in 2025, the Baobab Equity AMC is doing exactly what it set out to do.

Key contributors during the year include:

Baobab Local

Pan African Resources
Sibanye
Zeda
African Rainbow Minerals

Baobab Global

Airtel Africa
Ambev SA
Uranium Royalty Co
Nexgen Energy
Warrior Metcoal

ClucasGray

Metrofile
EPE Capital Partners
Astral
Zeda
Caxton

Airtel Africa was a standout performer during 2025, appreciating over 200% during the year. It is a good example of the type of differentiated exposure we are able to provide. It is small, off the beaten path, but is an above average business with a very long growth runway ahead of it. On purchase the investment case was strongly supported by a potential future listing of the highly attractive mobile money business. Not much changed for the company during the year, apart from things in Nigeria becoming “less bad”. The path from uninvestable to “not so bad” remains a key hunting ground and source of opportunity for us.

2025 proved to be a mediocre year for many of our core holdings which was a headwind for returns. Companies like HCL, Bollore and KAL Group did little wrong operationally, but attracted little investor attention during the year. We used the weakness to add to positions, partially funded by profit taking in lower quality counters. HCL has recently become fairly active in a number of value creating transactions, whilst I would be very surprised if we don’t see decent activity to unlock value at Bollore during 2026. KAL Group management continues to do what they do well, looking for sensible ways to grow their retail operations. Unlike other domestic retailers who seem intent on chasing growth offshore, they remain focused and disciplined within their niche areas of operation.

The fact that many of our highest conviction holdings lagged in 2025 gives us confidence going forward. In a world where it seems everyone is a momentum investor chasing the hottest themes of the day, we continue to find opportunity in overlooked and underappreciated parts of the market.
